

The Rick Derringer Fret Protector

Years ago, every time I put one of my guitars into the case, it always came out with little nicks and scratches on the frets. Those nicks & scratches came from the strings being pushed flat against the frets during travel. Each and every time the case was jarred; little marks were nicked into my frets. It would always drive me nuts – each time I went to bend a string; I had to deal with feeling, and hearing those little nicks and scratches on my frets.

Then I came up with an answer to my problem. I called it the Fret Protector. It worked so well, I needed one for each of my guitars.

From then on I have never put my guitar away without the Fret Protector. People see me open my case and invariably remark, “Hey, is that a fretless guitar?” “No”, I’d say, “it’s my fret protector.” You couldn’t buy them anywhere. It was my little secret weapon.

A new day has dawned, and I am now allowing all guitarists to share in my miracle discovery – THE WORLD FAMOUS RICK DERRINGER FRET PROTECTOR. Made of a special long lasting plastic, with a soft covering on the fret side, and a tough Velcro fastener, it protects the frets from the string’s mechanical and electrochemical influence during transportation. It’s suitable for all types of hard and soft cases, and to make it even more special and collectable, each orange Fret Protector will come personally autographed and numbered.

A great Holiday gift giving idea: Get them for all your guitars and give them to your friends, too. They will love them!
